

Hi Jade!

I really like the design so far! The colors you chose work really well with the content of the page as an allusion to the Australian flag and patriotism in Australia. Additionally, the size of the text is what I imagined when thinking about how to modernize the topic of the emu war. I like how the shadow from the home page remains as a motif for the remainder of the pages, and you also effectively aligned text with pictures on the emu page. Here are a few things that I noticed that could make the overall site stronger:

- On the home page, I appreciate the contrast in the red pull quote, but it feels a little awkwardly placed. I wonder how it would look in the top right of the page, or under the picture to keep consistent with an F pattern design.
- There may be other design opportunities echo the shadow motif you have created.
- Even though I originally separated these topics, I think this website could get away with combining the war, first attempt, and second attempt and breaking it down into a sort of timeline.
- I wonder if text and image could interact more in headers in other pages.

Overall, there is a clear, consistent concept, and design decisions make sense for effective communication! I can't wait to see how it turns out, and let me know if you have questions!
